BLETCHLEY PARK

National Codes Centre

During World War II the German armed forces top secret codes were broken at Bletchley Park, providing the Allies with vital information towards their war effort. Situated North-West of London, Bletchley played host to a diverse group of code breakers. Among the ciphers that were broken were Enigma and Lorenz. Seeing one of the Enigma Machines, including the rare 'Abwehr G312', is undoubtedly the highlight of a busy day at Bletchley Park. This model is produced for Bletchley Park with half the allocation reserved for them and the balance available for the club.

≡ Rail Express Parcels

Motor vans were used for railway parcels collection and delivery work and many designs were seen in British Rail liveries until the service was closed down in 1981. In the late sixties all the vehicles were transferred to National Freight Carriers, but some were then leased back to British Railways. We show our Mini van which would have been on the road in 1970.

Crawford's Cream Crackers

William Crawford founded Crawford biscuits in 1813, he started off in a small shop in Shore of Leith, Edinburgh, Scotland. During this time supplies of cheap sugar and flour, plus chemical raising agents such as bicarbonate of soda, led to the development of many sweet biscuit recipes. In Britain several entrepreneurs laid the foundations of the modern biscuit industry. The firms of Carrs, Huntley & Palmer, and Crawfords were all established in this period. All were swallowed up by larger groups, but the names fortunately still remain.

Wall's ICE CREAM

ANG008
Wall's
Edition 2,000

To complete the set of Wall's Ice Cream vans we have an Anglia delivery van. Wall's turned to ice cream production as a consequence of the phobia people had over eating pork during the summer in the early part of the 20th century. At the time home refrigeration was not widespread and pork didn't keep well during the hot weather. As a result Wall's were laying off staff with a large drop in sales - hence the switch to ice-cream.

Pioneer Corps
Edition 2,000

The strength of the Corps in May 1945 was probably one of the largest in the Army and included 12,000 officers, 16,000 UK personnel and 400,000 Pioneers from other parts of the Commonwealth. It was responsible for a civilian labour force of 1,074,000 and a prisoner of war force of 173,000. Twenty six Pioneer Companies went ashore on D-Day in Normandy on 6th June 1944, 79 days later there were 231 Companies - over 68,000 men. Army commanders in every theatre of war paid tribute to the work of the Corps without which they freely admitted that the war could not have been won. Over 2,800 British personnel of the Corps laid down their lives overseas.

SOUTHDOWN FLEET SUPPORT

The release of the Southdown bus earlier this year proved very popular so we have followed it up with the release of a Morris Minor support vehicle.

A word from Michael

We are deciding on a new release over the next few weeks. Only a few years ago we would be discussing what would be our new model for next year. Now we have moved into what appears to be a release each quarter of new tooling. The next items to look forward to is the Mini Pick Up which will be around in November we think, with an Ice Cream variant. We will also release an estate version of the Mini. We have just begun carving a new model for release in February/March 2007 which looks nice and I'm told this hasn't appeared as a 1:43rd scale before - a sixties vehicle. We may also release an additional item in January next year - depending on scheduling. So much to do for poor old Taff!!! Until next time

Take care
Michael

Ronnie Barker

Edition 2,000

Ronnie Barker was born in Bedford. As a young man he joined the Manchester Repertory Company as an Assistant Stage Manager. In 1956, he landed his first radio job and two years later, appeared in Frankie Vaughan's first film, Wonderful Things! He then went on to appear in The Navy Lark and The Seven Faces of Jim, starring Jimmy Gilbert. In 1966 he joined The Frost Report as a sketch-writer and performer. It was on this show that he met his future comedy partner Ronnie Corbett. This led to that fantastically funny show The Two Ronnies. Sadly he died in October 2006.
