UK & EIRE 2 Guineas (£2.10) USA $5.00

When we released the Chipperfields set of vehicles there was a small article on the generator truck, in one of the collector magazines, with a comment on the side skirts - the inference was that it didn't look right. Well our model was based on a real army truck that was specially produced by Bedford, which carried a Rolls Royce generator - the message being that a vehicle doesn't have to look right to be right. The side skirts were particularly bulky, in order to store the extensive amount of cabling that was required. Interestingly I spoke to a collector who had worked at the Circus who confirmed that the origin of the truck was indeed the army. The specifications for such trucks were always a lot higher in order to survive the more rugged conditions experienced during operations. They made an ideal choice for life in circus and of course the reliability of the Rolls Royce engine made it a very desirable piece of equipment. We have reproduced the Army generator truck in this older livery as part of the TK range of non circus vehicles which will include British Rail personnel carriers along with other interesting designs.

Last months double release of the Royal Mail vans proved most popular and this month we have the Post Office Telephones Bedford CA which is a welcome addition to the range, The GPO's fleet was massive and at the time it ceased to be a Government department in 1969 they had over 38,000 vehicles. Over the years many of the great names contributed to the fleet such as Maudslay, Morris Guy and Foden to name just a few.

In 1965 five police forces were voluntarily united to form the Mid-Anglia Constabulary, the headquarters of which was in Brampton. After nine years the Mid Anglia Force became the present Cambridgeshire Constabulary. The amalgamation allowed for the formation of the underwater section, being a specialist unit within the Constabulary. Our Morris J2 is shown with the crest on the door.

When you consider that Ford produced over 200,000 Anglia vans, it's not surprising that there are so many different liveries around. Over a life time it could have been repainted three or four times - Dusty reckons there are at least 30,000 liveries if you ignore the large fleets. This Clean Heat version advertises the use of gas for simple room heating. My memories are a little different and I well remember the gas engineers ripping up our front garden in the name of North Sea Gas, the whole street was changed over within 2 days. Today I think it would take a month. TAFF

A lovely twin set of Minis with the Lyons Maid livery who had started to make ice-cream in 1894 using the turbine bowl method. When refrigeration was further developed after the First World War production increased and automation helped to bring the product to a wider market. Unlike America, ice-cream in Britain was seasonal with fluctuating sales depending on the weather pattern. With use of frozen carbon dioxide Lyons were able to ship their ice-cream from the Cadby Hall factory, by train, to most parts of the UK setting up cold stores at several rail-heads. Ice-cream sales continued to grow and new hand-held products were introduced such as the frozen ice-lolly. As with the other parts of the Lyons group expansion of market share was all important and many smaller, regional ice-cream businesses were purchased This not only increased Lyons' market share of ice-cream, but brought into the group new, local production facilities thus saving expensive refrigerated transport costs.

"A lovely idea, but I don't think you would have seen one of these on the roads". Those were the words that confronted me at a show earlier this year; when I explained that the model was based on an original vehicle I received a smile.

So here are the pictures to prove it. Lee's father built the vehicle at the back of the house about 30 years ago and it was regularly seen around the vintage car shows, the young lad in the picture is Russ Harvey's son who is peering inside. The vehicle appeared in a BBC drama called the Riff Raff Element and it is currently stored in a shed in Hull. As promised in Globe 90 I have now added the corrugation down the sides of the vehicle and we are releasing this version in a blue livery. I would love to drive this and I wonder if it would get past 40mph ! TAFF
