VOL01CS Volvo FH Curtainside – Barline Transport

Barline Transport was founded in May 1998 by Barry and Pauline Maybin and operated from Larne, Co. Antrim in Northern Ireland. Although the company has now ceased trading, at its peak, the distinctive blue and white liveried fleet comprised 30 tractor units and around 75 trailers, including the Volvo FH Curtainside. The company offered a wide range of transport solutions to a customer base within Ireland and across the UK.

VOL01CS	1:76	-----	£18.99

This brand new introduction to the Oxford Haulage Company series of 1:76 scale models is a finely detailed replica of the Barline Transport Volvo FH Curtainside. As with the first release of any new tool, it is already proving to be a 'must have' to fill the gap in the modern truck fleet miniature line-up, as well as being very appealing to those of you who collect models with the ever-popular Irish theme.

New FH tooling for the Volvo, means that in just over 20 months we have released a whole variety of cabs. We started with the Scania which had four chassis combinations. The DAF came next with three cab combinations followed by the MAN which also has three cab combinations.

Wall's

ICE CREAM

MORE THAN A TREAT – a food

Wall's (Ice Cream) Ltd for many years, as an independent and then as a Unilever subsidiary, made and marketed Wall's ice cream in the UK. Originally an independent British meat producer, Thomas Wall and Son Ltd reputedly considered manufacturing ice cream in 1913 to fill in the seasonal downturn in sales of meat pies and sausages in the summer months, but the advent of the First World War prevented this. Wall's was acquired by MacFisheries in 1920 and then (1922) by Lever Brothers Ltd (together with Margarine Union, the founder company of Unilever). Ice cream production commenced in 1922 at a factory in Acton, London. As ice cream production grew in significance, Unilever split the company into two, T Wall and Son (Ice Cream) Ltd and T Wall and Son (Meats) Ltd, selling off the meat company in 1994. This is an authentic Walls ice cream livery adding to our very popular Austin threeway..

The Jensen Interceptor saloon had a distinctive large, curving wrap-around rear window that doubled as a tailgate. The original specification included electric windows, reclining front seats, a wood rimmed steering wheel, radio with twin speakers, reversing lights and an electric clock. It was by Jensen Motors between 1966 and 1976, with over 6,400 being produced.

The car broke with Jensen tradition by having a steel bodyshell instead of glass-reinforced plastic and by having the body designed by an outside firm, Carrozzeria Touring of Italy, rather than the in-house staff. The early bodies were Italian-built, by Vignale, before production by Jensen themselves began in West Bromwich.

I recently spoke to a collector, who had purchased all of our Interceptors, he was surprised at the level of detail and differences between the Series I/II/III's. Wheels, bumpers, interiors, body trim etc. Some are subtle, it's a bit like playing 'Spot the Difference'. To achieve this level of detail it means spending a lot more time on the design of the model, often the problem is getting to see the real thing. TAFF

LAND ROVER FIRE

Back in the 1950's most of the smaller fire stations were equipped with a pump and a Series 1 Land Rover. These Land Rovers were equipped to suit the needs of each authority. They varied in their complexity and were built on 80-inch, 86-inch and 88-inch chassis. These small and easily manoeuvrable vehicles were capable of operating in restricted spaces that larger appliances could not reach. Many were later sold to works fire services or small airfields where they filled the role of first-response vehicles. This is the first in the release of several modified Land Rovers that we are issuing based on Fire vehicles.

So many requests for the black version of the DS420 to match with the hearse. So here it is. We have no stock of the 1:43rd version of the hearse again, but many of you club members will already have that model.

Launched in 1968, over 3700 DS420's were manufactured. Features / options included electrically controlled windows, drinks compartments, TV's, flags and bullet-proofing. Perhaps one day I will have enough money to be chauffeur driven in one of these, until then I have to make do with the Transit ! TAFF

The Army Fire Service, later called the Army Department Fire Service, was the fire service which performed firefighting duties on British Army camps. Its personnel were largely soldiers until 1959, when the fire service was civilianised. It was administratively part of the Royal Army Service Corps, but was semi-autonomous and had its own insignia, such as cap badge and stable belt. The Army Department Fire Service later amalgamated into the Ministry of Defence Fire Service.

Our latest Goddess release, in red was not so common as the Auxiliary Fire Service green versions, but is an authentic livery. Our next Goddess is several months away as we modify the tooling to accept meshing for a Northern Ireland version. This is the design cell for the model as a taster.

John Mitchell				NEW
CODE MAN04CS	SCALE 1:76	EDITION -----	PRICE £18.99

Scottish liveried models are always popular with our collectors of haulage vehicles and this very modern well-detailed John Mitchell lorry, with its pristine, almost clinical livery, will prove no exception.

The John Mitchell road haulage fleet consists of around 110 vehicles, just under a hundred tractor units and 230 trailers, all operating from their Grangemouth base in Stirlingshire. The mix features curtainsides – as our example – flatbeds and skeletal trailers, as well as powder tankers to cope with dry loads. The company is still family owned, established in 1956 by John Mitchell, and now managed by Iain Mitchell. The company has won a series of awards over the years, the most recent being the Transport News - Scottish Fleet of the Year 2006. At the same time, Transport News also awarded Iain Mitchell a personal tribute - the Scottish Road Haulage Personality of the Year.

Many of you will know my association with Construction vehicles having released the first versions back in 1995/6. They were a huge success and spawned a whole new range. These are perfect functioning models, and fit perfectly on our low loader. I know the scale is slightly off as they are 1:87, but construction machines come in such a variety of sizes - they work perfectly. Items are boxed as Cararama. TAFF

How they measure up on our Nootboom low loader - they look just the business. 1:87 scale but perfect loads.

Our latest release in our series of Mini Vans, this time a Royal Navy Mini. The van was used by the careers office and was mobile throughout the country. Always a popular livery British Rail, this time a Mechanical Horse. The advert makes interesting reading - Luggage in Advance - Collection, Conveyance and Delivery, all for just 5/6. I calculate this to be just over 25p. I always used to get confused with the conversion. 4d and 5d both converted to 2p, which seemed very unfair, as before the changeover I used to get 8 Black Jacks (or Fruit Salads) for a 1d, then when the change took place we only got 32 Black Jacks for 2p, making it 8 short, terribly unfair - not that it bothered me that much - more the principal! # FRONT LINE FIGHTERS

A small break in the release programme due to the factory holidays. We have a lot more planes scheduled for release and this will build into quite an exciting collection covering many fighters from World War II. All the models come with a stand and Martin did a clever bit of engineering by angling the support on the plinth. This means that the planes can be angled in four different rotations, very useful for displaying them in a more 'active' way.

ROYAL ULSTER CONSTABULARY

The Royal Ulster Constabulary was the name of the police force in Northern Ireland from 1922 to 2001. It was founded on 1 June 1922 out of the Royal Irish Constabulary, the Belfast Borough Police Force and the Londonderry Borough Police Force (known colloquially as the "Derry City Force" - a name which stayed for many years). At its peak the force had around 8,500 officers with a further 4,500 who were members of the RUC Reserve. The RUC had long used armoured vehicles to provide protection to its officers. The first to be based on the Land Rover appeared in 1957, on a Series 1 109" wheelbase pick-up body (registration WZ 599, fleet number 233). This incorporated only a basic level of protection, designed to repel bricks and bottles in a public order situation. Our model is based on this first version and carries the authentic registration.

When I was young (yes there was a time!), Ford seemed to dominate the British landscape, their success built on years of supplying reliable cars at affordable prices. I always remember our neighbour had a Cortina MK 1, then a MK 2 and then a MK3 -this was never quite as reliable, but at least it had a distinctive look. The MK 4 was disappointing - a very boxy car, but it still had the Ford name. Many companies had it as the sole model available for their employees as company cars - this was the case with Mettoy. Dusty can remember to the day, the strikes at Fords, which started on the 22nd September 1978 and lasted for two months. During this time it became impossible to get a new Ford and his was due for renewal. The cars were purchased through the buying office, Mr Baxter was in charge - cross him at your peril! - he was a fantastic buyer who would nail everyone down to the last penny. Anyway, instead of a Cortina Dusty was given a Maxi instead - he hated it, he wasn't going to ask Mr Baxter to change it. From that point onwards the company decided that the policy of only buying Fords would change, it wasn't long before all sorts of other cars could be seen in the company car park. Dusty has always said that the strike at Fords opened the door for Vauxhall to gain a foothold with the arrival of the Cavalier. The Fords above are a selection of some early models, all in authentic colours. TAFF
